Explanatory Note

The Technical Information Programs Unit of the Carolina Population Center is in the process of compiling an International Directory of Population Information Resources. The increasing volume of knowledge being generated by population research and program evaluation has made it evident that existing channels of communication and exchange are inadequate. We hope that publication of this Directory will help to improve communications and pave the way for greater international exchange of population information at the scientific and technical level.

The Directory will be designed to offer data on the information resources of organizations known to have teaching, research, and/or service interests in the field of population/family planning. The task of collecting such information is exceedingly complex, and we now realize that the first edition of the Directory can be only a "rough draft," with many inconsistencies and unavoidable omissions. We hope that publication and distribution of the first edition will make it easier to compile a more complete and accurate listing for the second edition.

It will be some time before even the first edition will be ready for publication. We hope to have it out before January 1, 1972. In the meantime, we are listing here the names and addresses of organizations responding to our preliminary questionnaire as of April 1, 1971. The purpose of this first questionnaire was to establish a mailing list of appropriate organizations from whom we could then collect more detailed information. This list is therefore by no means complete, but should still be helpful in the absence of a finished directory. (The listing for Indian organizations is being done by the Central Family Planning Institute of New Delhi, and these addresses are not available to us at this time.)

We would appreciate any suggestions for additions to this list and/or comments on the content and format of the forthcoming directory.
